This country can't stand when it makes one citi-zen support another. I shall never vote These are what may always be found for a congressman who is in favor of government pensions. The idea that a Yankee army will ever be sent South to pull down its monuments is too preposterous to be repeated. On Memorial day, so far as one can gather from the reports of addresses, there was not an unkind word spoken regarding the Southern people, and particularly against the rank and file of the confederate army, whose valor, aside from the cause in which it was displayed, has won the admiration of the age. But for how many people in the South does this prejured Rosser speak, even in egard to pensions? Last November Gen. Rosser was the Populist candidate for congress in the Seventh Virginia welcome that day. district, running against Mr. Turner, St. Louis, Kansas City Democrat, who was elected to fill the vacancy occasioned by the resignation of Governor O'Ferrall. This fact may account for his idiotic runt about pensions and the North. Still, many people in the North would like to know how St. Paul and Minneapolis in the North would like to know how extensive is the bitter feeling expressed by Populist Rosser in the South against the North, and if all of his party in the South are us hostile to pensions as are the Democrats of the South and the special Cleveland organs of the North.

It is difficult to draw a material dis tinction between the northern and southern portions of Missouri as to the natural wealth of the two sections, yet it is a fact that in the way of agriculture Northern Missouri has made the greatest progress. It has no waste land. Its people have kept steadily on in the cultivation of the rich soil, and as a result they are as a rule well to do, with small indebtedness and with as bright a future before them as those of any other agricultural section of the whole country. Wheat, corn, cattle and hoge are the principal sources of their income, but the climate and soil fayor the production of anything which belongs to the same latitude anywhere.

The saddest sight that has eyer beer seen in that part of the state was be held near Savannah, Illinois, a few days ago, when young Isaac Clappison was crushed under an engine. He was a brakeman, and had been caught in working around his train. The poor fellow at first screamed piteously for help athe ponderous mass settled down upon him, but as friends gathered around be called for his mother, two brothers and a sister, who reside in Sabula. All this time eager hands were "jacking" up the engine but it took nearly an hour to release the tortured man. A special train and while awaiting their arrival, Clappi had a fine bass voice, and never per haps, and the words of that old by an seem sweeter, or seem fuller of meaning, that when they came from his lips. To each acquaistance who came up, he extended his hand, saying, "shake hands with me for the last time." After the arrival of his mother, sister and brothers, he talk of with them all, and said he liked to mother. "She is the girl I am going to marry," was the roply. The young lady lives in Maquoketa, and could not reach her lover before he died. Chappison then asked his sister to sing his favorite Groceries, Fine Confections; hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," and she did so, as will as grief would allow, although it was with a choking voice. Just before he died he whispered to his loved ones. "This is father's birthday;
